Press Release: Levy County Development Department Launches New Online Zoning Portal Through OpenGov

Date of Issue: August 28, 2026

Bronson, Florida — Levy County is making it easier for residents, property owners, contractors, and businesses to complete development and permitting business with the County by expanding the services available through its OpenGov online portal. Beginning Monday, August 31, 2026, the Levy County Development Department will add zoning services and residential and commercial driveway permit applications to the same online platform already used for building permits.

Services Already Available Through the OpenGov Portal:

- Apply for building permits
- Upload plans and supporting documents
- Pay applicable permit fees online
- Track the status of permit applications
- View application and permit information
- Communicate and respond to requests for additional information during the review process
- Request and track required inspections

New Services Available August 31

- Lot Split applications, including one-time parent parcel splits, family lot splits, and boundary line adjustments
- Pre-Application Development Review Meeting Requests
- Unity of Title applications
- Zoning Compliance applications
- Residential Driveway Permit applications
- Commercial Driveway Permit applications

Bringing building permits, zoning applications, and driveway permits together in one online location provides citizens with a more convenient and coordinated process. It also allows County staff to better streamline reviews and inspections and provides applicants with greater ability to follow their applications throughout the process.

Residents and contractors who already use OpenGov for building permits will be able to use the same account and familiar system to access the newly added services.
